The International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC) is the global voice of the world's working people.

The ITUC's primary mission is the promotion and defence of workers' rights and interests, through international cooperation between trade unions, global campaigning and advocacy within the major global institutions.

Its main areas of activity include the following: trade union and human rights; economy, society and the workplace; equality and non-discrimination; and international solidarity.

The ITUC adheres to the principles of trade union democracy and independence. It is governed by four-yearly world congresses, a General Council and an Executive Bureau.

The ITUC regional organisations are the Asia-Pacific Regional Organisation (ITUC-AP), the African Regional Organisation (ITUC-AF) and the American Regional Organisation (TUCA). It cooperates with the European Trade Union Confederation, including through the Pan-European Regional Council.

The ITUC has close relations with the Global Union Federations and the Trade Union Advisory Committee to the OECD (TUAC). It works closely with the International Labour Organisation and with several other UN Specialised Agencies.

Deputy President

Cathy Feingold was elected as Deputy President of the ITUC in December 2018 and was re-elected at its Fifth World Congress in Melbourne, Australia, November 2022.

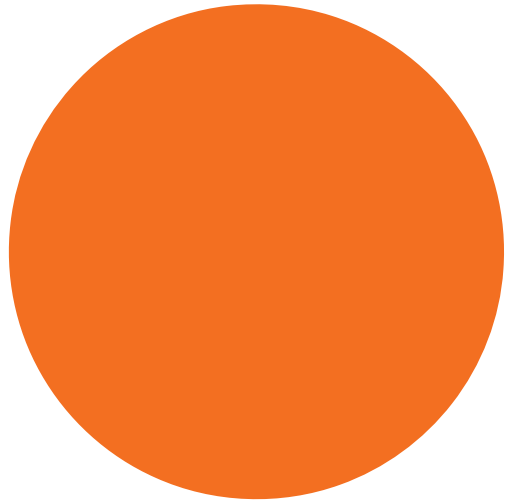

As director of the AFL-CIO's International Department, Cathy is a leading advocate on global workers' rights issues.

For more than 20 years, she has worked on trade union rights, women's rights and economic justice at both global and grassroots level with a commitment to strengthening the voice of working people in policy debates.

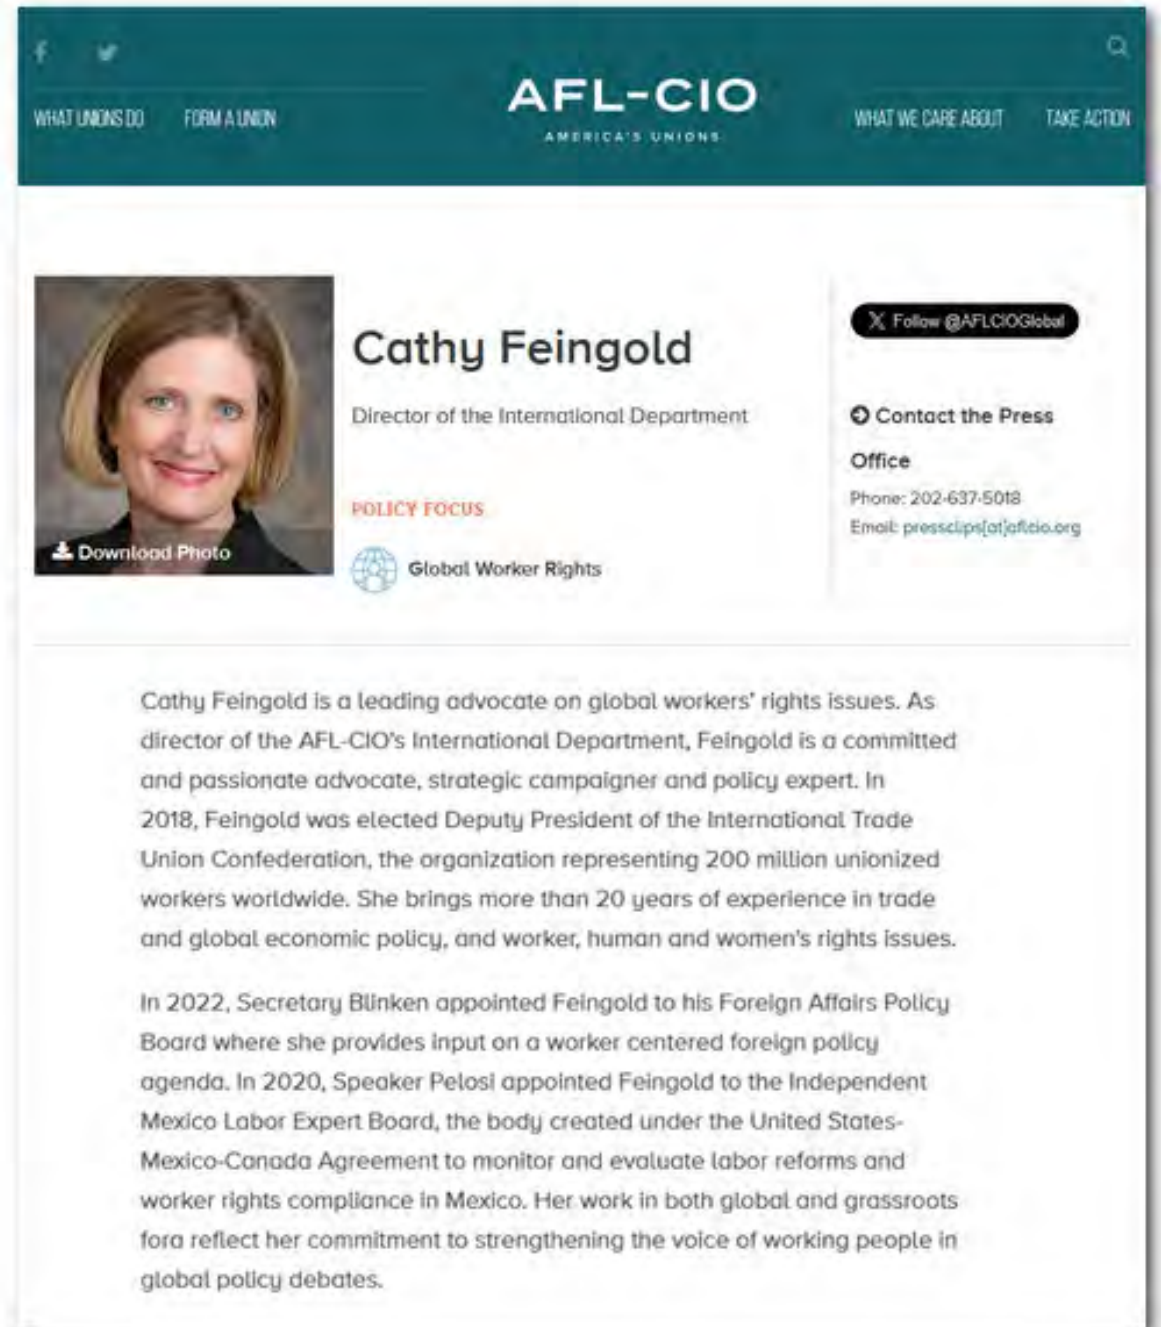

Cathy is the former director of the AFL-CIO Solidarity Center's work in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Here, she partnered with local trade unions to develop innovative campaigns to improve the working conditions of domestic, migrant and informal-economy workers. The work led to a growing movement of domestic workers who affiliated to the Dominican labour movement.

In Haiti, she developed labour law training programs and helped publish the first Creole language version of Haitian labour law to help working people access justice. She led the organisation's humanitarian response to the country's January 2010 earthquake.

In addition to her trade union work, Cathy has also worked for large international organisations and small grassroots NGOs. She has written about the impact of economic policies on market women in Nigeria and, as a Fulbright research scholar in Nicaragua, she investigated the impact of structural adjustment policies on women workers. She continues to be a strong advocate for gender equity and working women's issues.

Political power: Probably the single biggest thread running through the resolutions adopted at Second International congresses was that every major issue facing working people was inextricably tied to the question of political power, and the need to replace domination by capitalists and landlords with the rule of working people. A revolutionary transformation of the entire social order was necessary.

War and militarism: Workers need to oppose all imperialist wars, Second International resolutions asserted. Not an ounce of support should be extended to these ventures, they insisted. The fight against militarism and war, together with the entire war machine, is a key task, part of the overall working-class struggle.

Democratic rights: Resolutions adopted at international congresses stressed the centrality of political and democratic rights. They viewed these rights as tools in the revolutionary struggle, and pointed to why the working class has the biggest stake in the fight to win them.

Trade unions: Central importance was placed on unions, seeing them as the most basic organization to defend workers' interests. The right to unionization needs to be defended, along with eliminating all restrictions on the exercise of union power.

Imperialism and colonialism: Colonial conquest and plunder of the Third World was seen as simply an extension of capitalist exploitation, according to the Second International's adopted resolutions. Workers therefore need to actively support and champion the struggle for freedom by oppressed peoples fighting imperialist and colonialist domination, along with its racist justifications and rationalizations.

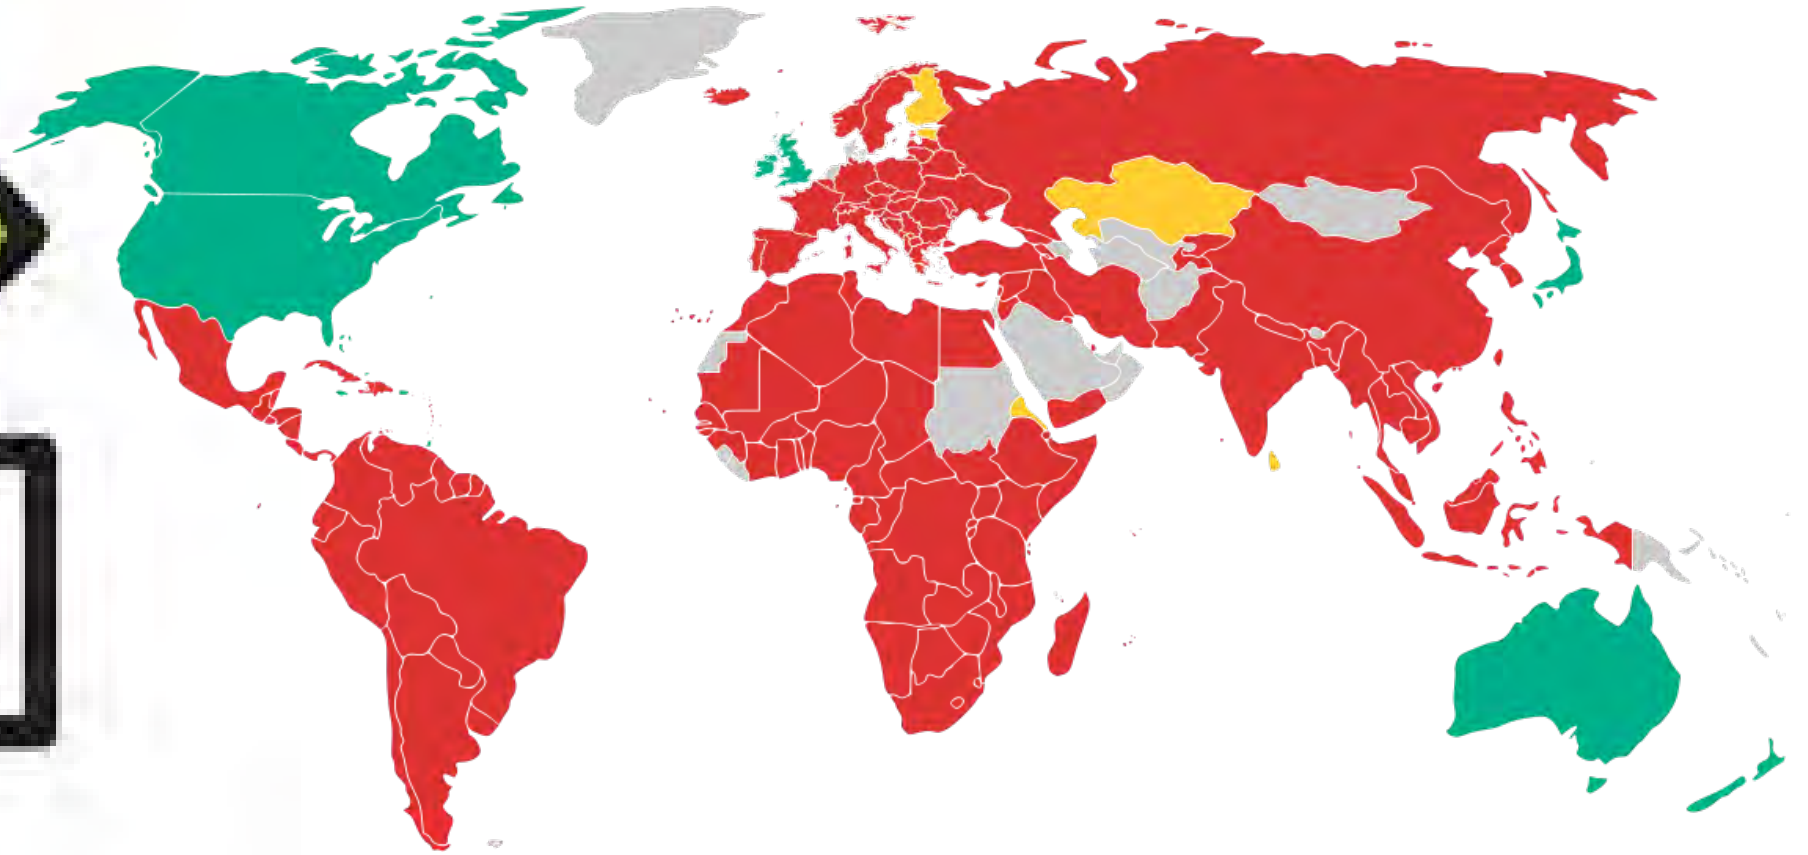

Immigration: The Second International's resolution of 1907 pointed to the need to oppose all restrictions on the free immigration and emigration of workers, as well as to combat all forms of racist scapegoating. Immigrant workers should be viewed not as helpless victims but as allies and reinforcements in the struggle against capitalism.

Labor legislation: The fight for laws limiting working hours, regulating working conditions, banning child labor, mandating equal pay for equal work, and guaranteeing workers the right to organize was central to socialists in the Second International.

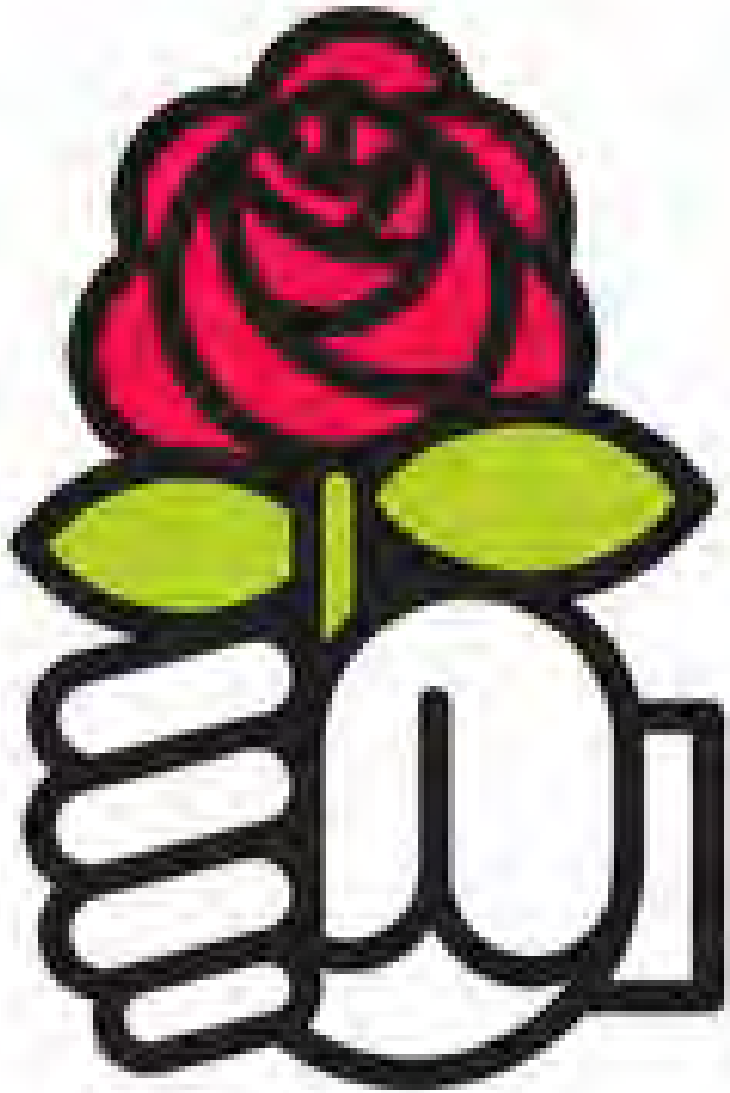

Public education and cultural advancement: As socialists recognized over a century ago, the right of public education is a conquest of the working class in the fight to advance society. Access to education—including higher education—must be available to all, free of charge.

Women's emancipation: Multiple resolutions of the Second International addressed the oppression of women and how it is built into the very structure of capitalism. The fight against this oppression will play a central part in the overall revolutionary struggle, they pointed out.

REVENGE!

Workingmen, to Arms!!!

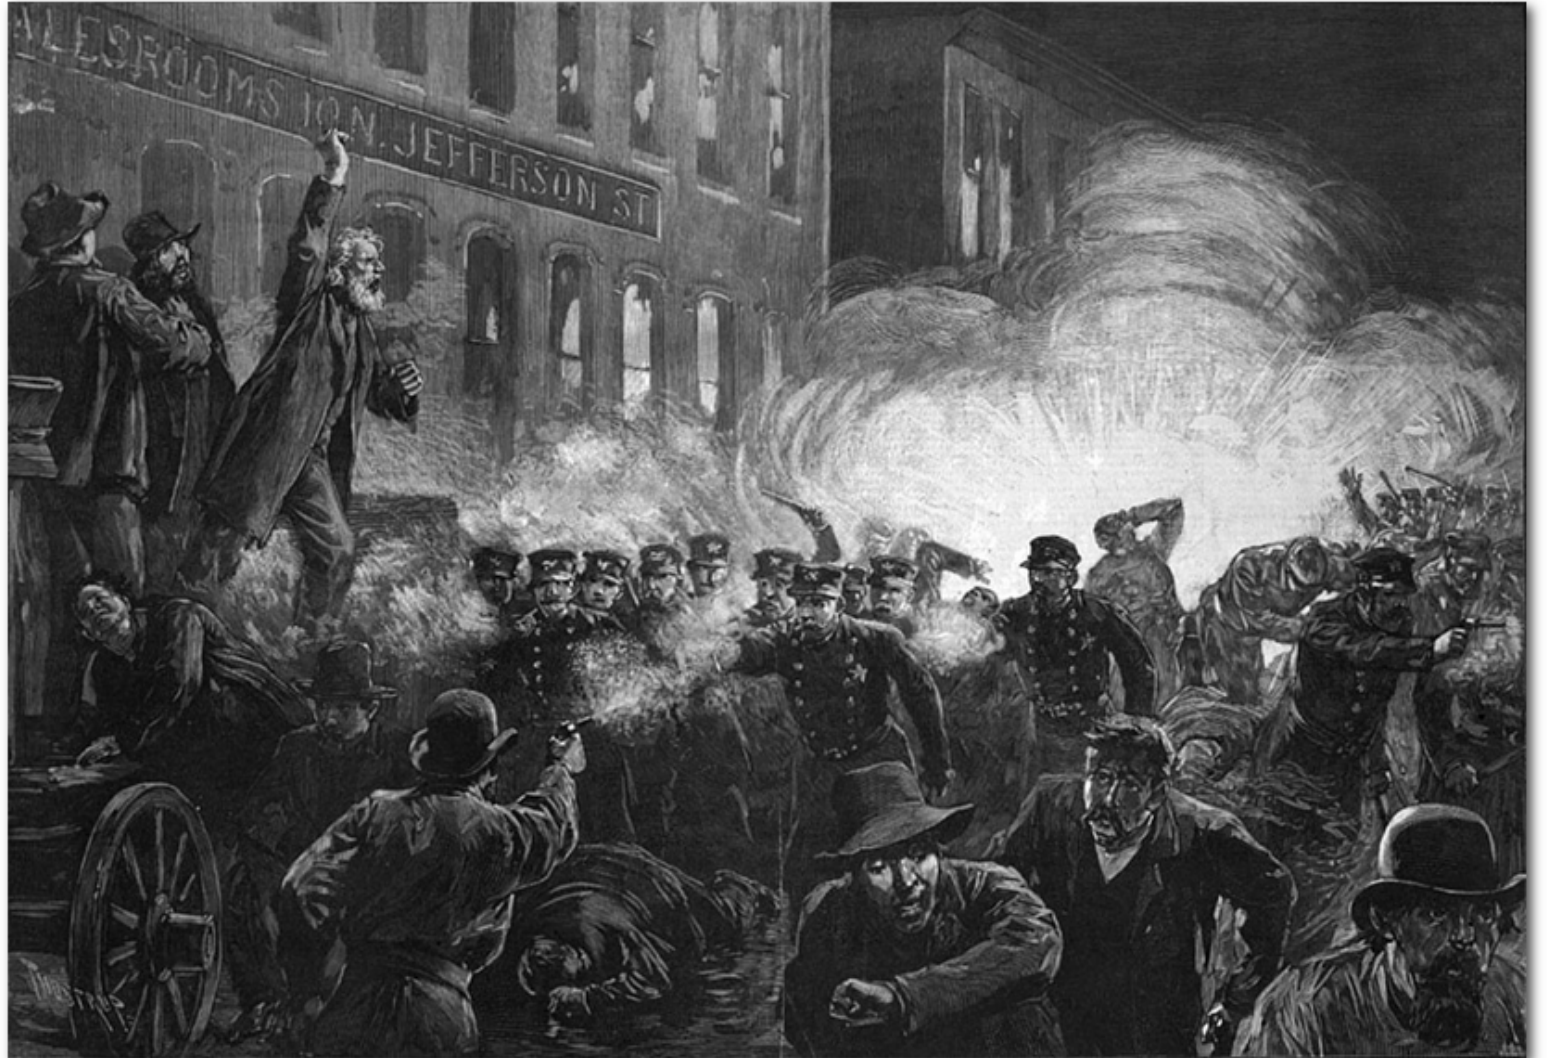

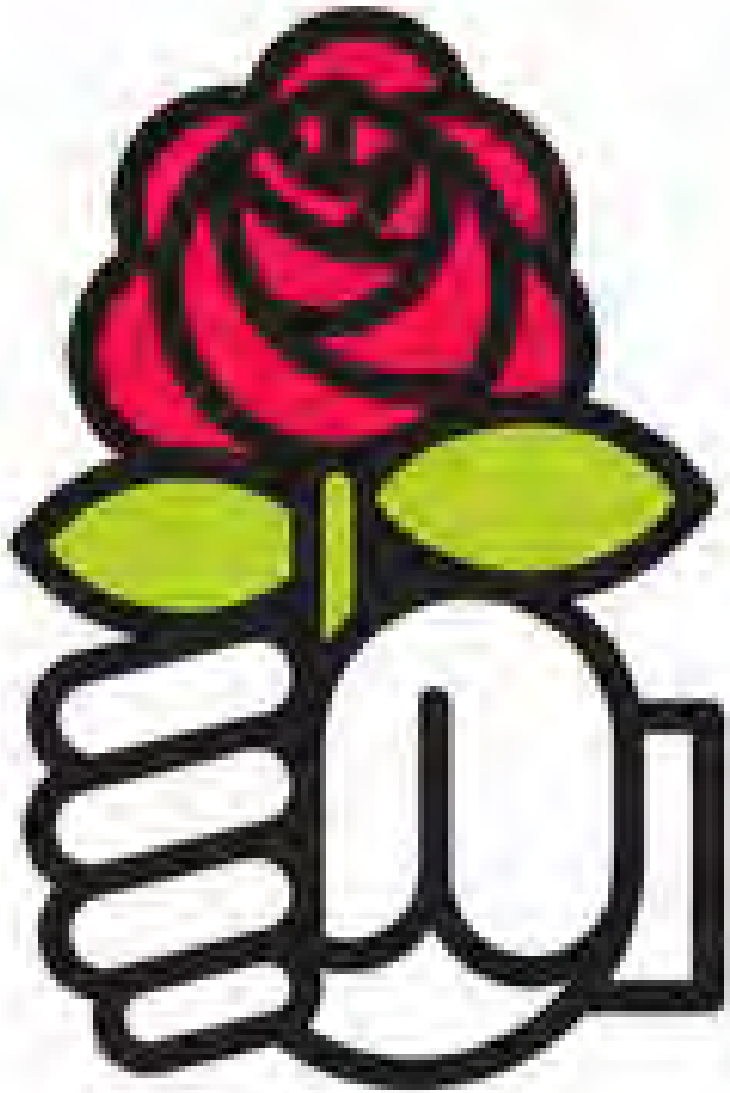

Your masters sent out their bloodhounds — the police —; they killed six of your brothers at McCormicks this afternoon. They killed the poor wretches, because they, like you, had the courage to disobey the supreme will of your bosses. They killed them, because they dared ask for the shortening of the hours of toil. They killed them to show you, "Free American Citizens!", that you must be satisfied and contented with whatever your bosses condescend to allow you, or you will get killed!

You have for years endured the most abject humiliations; you have for years suffered unmeasurable iniquities; you have worked yourself to death; you have endured the pangs of want and hunger; your Children you have sacrificed to the factory-lords — in short: You have been miserable and obedient slave all these years: Why? To satisfy the insatiable greed, to fill the coffers of your lazy thieving master? When you ask them now to lessen your burden, he sends his bloodhounds out to shoot you, kill you!

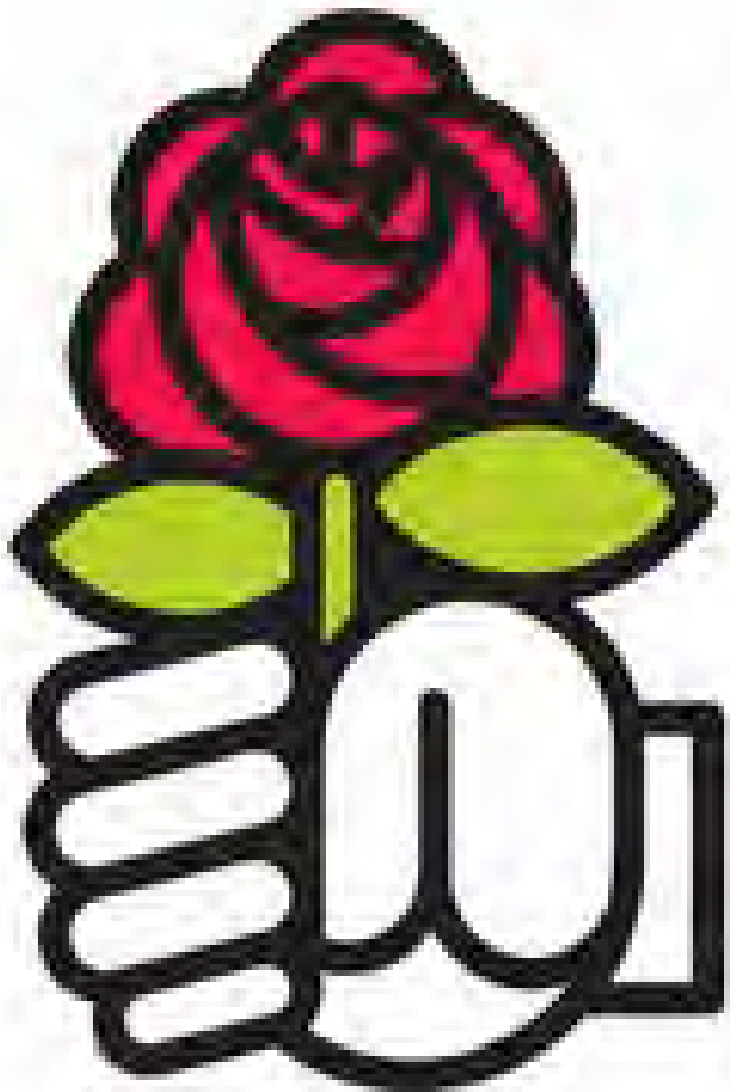

If you are men, if you are the sons of your grand sires, who have shed their blood to free you, then you will rise in your might, Hercules, and destroy the hideous monster that seeks to destroy you. To arms we call you, to arms!

Your Brothers.

More than a century after a Baptist minister from upstate New York took credit for writing the Pledge of Allegiance, new evidence suggests the possibility of a very different story.

For well over a century, the Pledge of Allegiance has been a pillar of America's national identity. New evidence has emerged, though, to indicate that perhaps the man who pledged that he originated it did not.

Francis Bellamy, a Baptist minister and Christian socialist from upstate New York, went so far as to swear in at least two affidavits that he had formulated the oath one blistering August night in 1892 in the Boston headquarters of a magazine for young people that he was promoting.

THE SOCIAL DEMOCRACY OF AMERICA.

EXECUTIVE BOARD.

EUGENE V. DEBS, Chairman. SYLVESTER KELIHER, Secretary.
JAMES HOGAN, Vice Chairman. WM. E. BURNS, Organizer.

ORGANIZED TO ESTABLISH THE NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE COMMONWEALTH.

TO SECURE THIS:—

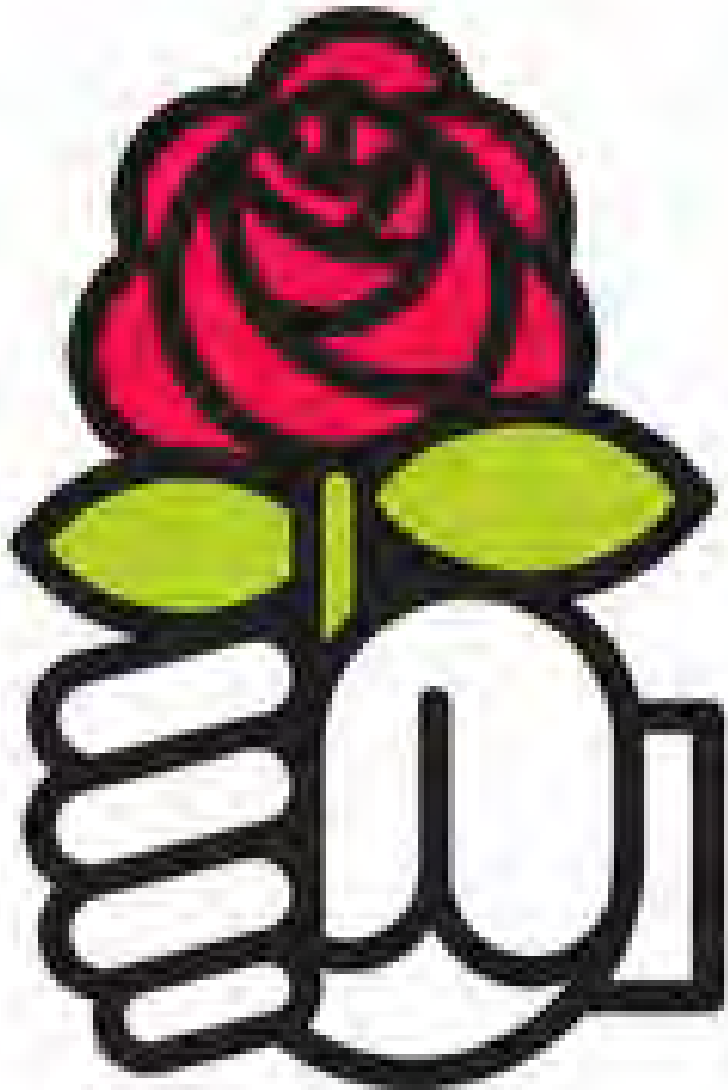

We call upon all honest citizens to unite under the banner of the Social Democracy of America, so that we may be ready to conquer capitalism by making use of our political liberty and by taking possession of the public power, so that we may put an end to the present barbarous struggle, by the abolition of capitalism, the restoration of the land, and of all the means of production, transportation and distribution, to the people as a collective body, and the substitution of the co-operative commonwealth for the present state of planless production, industrial war and social disorder—a commonwealth, which, although it will not make every man equal physically or mentally, will give to every worker the free exercise and the full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization and ultimately inaugurate the universal brotherhood of man. The Social Democracy of America will make democracy, “the rule of the people,” a truth, by ending the economic subjugation of the overwhelmingly great majority of the people.

With a view to the immediate relief of the people, all our efforts shall be put forth to secure to the unemployed self-supporting employment, using all proper ways and means to that end. For such purpose one of the States of the Union, to be hereafter determined, shall be selected for the concentration of our supporters and the introduction of co-operative industry, and then gradually extending the sphere of our operations until the National Co-operative Commonwealth shall be established.

All Good Citizens Are Eligible.

It includes social media icons for Facebook and Twitter, a search icon, and navigation links: "WHAT UNIONS DO", "FORM A UNION", "WHAT WE CARE ABOUT", and "TAKE ACTION". The main heading is "Eugene V. Debs". The text describes Debs as a man "too good for this world" who would give the clothes off his back to anyone in need. It mentions his leadership roles in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen (BLF), the American Railway Union (1894), the Socialist Party of America (1901), and the Industrial Workers of the World (1905). It also notes that he ran for president of the United States on the Socialist Party ticket five times between 1900 and 1920, winning millions of votes. A small portrait of Eugene V. Debs wearing a hat is shown to the right of the text.

Eugene V. Debs

Beloved by many contemporaries as a man "too good for this world" who would give the clothes off his back to anyone in need, "Gene" Debs was a prominent leader of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen (BLF) in his youth. Later he helped found the American Railway Union (1894), the Socialist Party of America (1901) and the Industrial Workers of the World (1905). The best-known apostle of industrial unionism in the early years of the 20th century, Debs ran for president of the United States on the Socialist Party ticket five times between 1900 and 1920, winning millions of votes. Although none of his dreams were realized during his lifetime, Debs inspired millions to believe in "the emancipation of the working class and the brotherhood of all mankind," and he helped spur the rise of industrial unionism and the adoption of progressive social and economic reforms.

Germany's role in the Russian Revolution

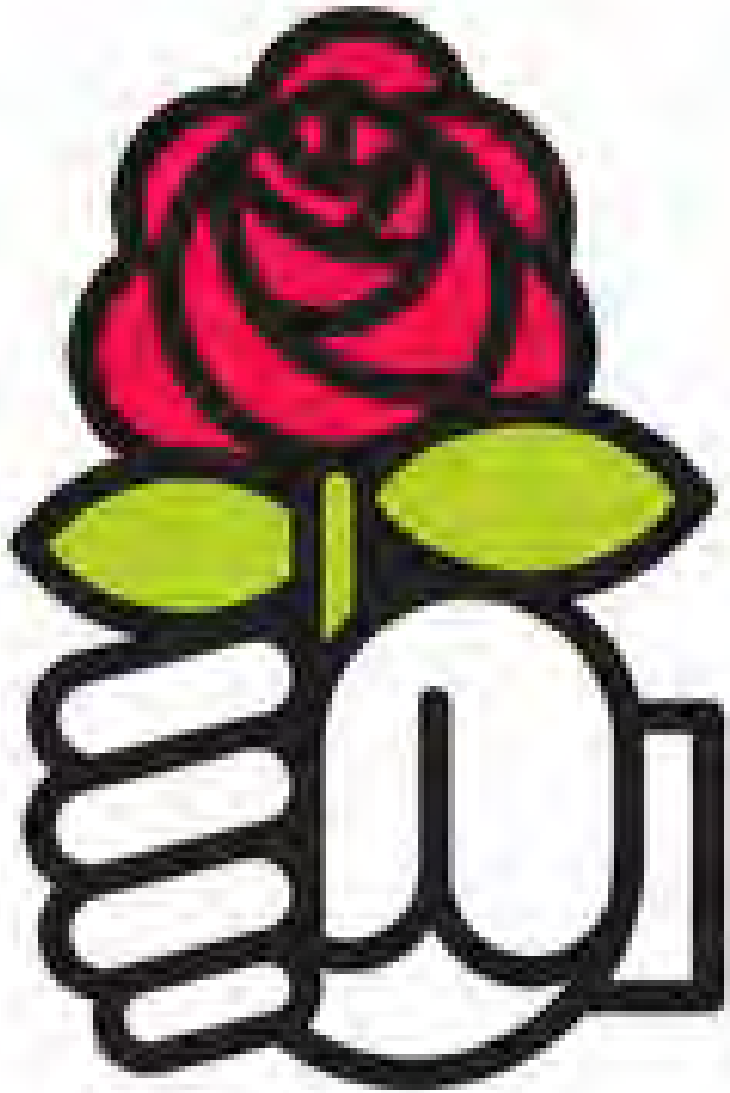

Volker Wagener cc
11/07/2017

The Russian Revolution has gone down in history as the victory of the workers and peasants over the czarist rulers. Few people realize the German kaiser was also involved: He gave aid to the Bolsheviks in 1917.

This Sunday: Cori Bush, plus a Progressive Strategy Session for the next 100 days

Join us Sunday at 4pm ET/1pm PT for a jam-packed PDA Town Hall. We'll hear from Rep. Cori Bush, nine days before her primary. We'll get an update from Arizona, where election day is Tuesday. Then, we'll consider two pressing questions for progressives at this high-stakes moment in our history: How can we best contribute to a Democratic victory in the fall?
